POETRY.

From Arthur's Home Gazette.

EXCELSIOR.

BY L. M.

Higher, higher, be thy motto,
In the path of Truth and Right;
Though the road is steep and rugged,
Victor's shield shall give thee might,
On through girlhood's rosy visions,
Fading fast as evening's light,
Till the rainbow-hues of child hood,
Vanish from thy aching sight.

Higher, higher, be thy motto,
In the path of Hope and Love;
Though the road is dark and cheerless,
There is light for thee above;

On though hating clouds intercept thee,
Gathering fast about thy way;

On though gloomy doubts distress thee,
Shutting out thy gilding ray.

Higher, higher be thy motto,
Upward in the narrow way;

When thy earth-born frates bind thee,

Look above, and humbly pray.

On through fluttering shapes and shadows,

That around thee ever play,

Till the mountain summit gainest,
